Miss Irene Sara Spalletti
1st STATEMENT
of the applicant: Miss I - S Spalletti
Statement n°: 1
n° of Exhibits: 121
Dated: 22/10/2024

IN THE FAMILY COURT AT EDMONTON
IN THE MATTER OF THE FAMILY LAW ACT 1996

BETWEEN:

Miss Irene Sara Spalletti

Applicant

- and -

Respondent

Mr Alexander Michael Luke Wolf Walker

1st STATEMENT
of the applicant Miss Irene Sara Spalletti

I understand that proceedings for contempt of court may be brought against anyone who makes, or causes to be made, a false statement in a document verified by a statement of truth without an honest belief in its truth. I believe that the facts stated in this form and any continuation sheets are true.

- (20) That same afternoon, the respondent went to the cash point and took out from the joint account that had a total balance of £500, the money I had put for the bills, £100 of my money to buy himself weed with (see Exhibit n° ISS-40). After I had noticed, I transferred the remaining balance back into my current account and by 23:00 purchased my Eurotunnel Shuttle back home to my parents.
- (21) The next morning, the 10th of July, the respondent woke me up demanding I'd put the money back in the joint account, I calmly refused by giving him a short and direct explanation and called him a thief taking my money out of the joint account and for refusing to pay me towards household purchases, this is when the electrician had to intervene (see Exhibit n° ISS-25).
- (22) The lies, the tactics used by the respondent to deny what we had previously agreed on and the extent of the threats and manipulations used by the respondent to avoid paying me back what caused me significant emotional distress and has undermined my financial security (see Exhibit n° ISS-41).
- (23) The respondent then threatened me with false legal statements regarding the house, claiming he owned more than me because he covered the building work (that I never agreed on) and that he had the power to evict me and the power to force the sale of the house without my agreement (see Exhibit n° ISS-42).
- (24) Then he started controlling me and lying to me that he had more power than me over the house, making threats he could have me out within seconds, faking laws or legal acts of some sort that he used as threats and manipulations, the respondent claimed he had the power to have my parents lose all their money they had put into the deposit of the house (see Exhibit n° ISS-43).
- (25) On the 14th July, I drove to my parents in Luxembourg with my cats and stayed there until the 2nd August; my cats remained until the respondent's arrest and consequent bail conditions.
- (26) On the 16th July I had broken up with the respondent. The breakup had zero emotional impact on the respondent, he said ok and went straight into talking about finances. He continuously and unstoppably argued with both my mother and I about the money he owed me. He unjustly retains funds that I contributed towards shared household expenses, despite repeated requests for reimbursement, denying agreeing on all the expenses, continuously claiming I had spent £8,000 without discussing any of it with him
- (27) The respondent immediately asked me for money for the holiday in Greece
(see Exhibit n° ISS-44)
- (a) He had opened his statement, looked at the available balance on the day we began the trip, then subtracted the last day's remaining balance and divided it by 2.
- (b) Wrongly included in the two weeks spendings were:
the respondent's personal unrelated expenses, his online expenses, his personal monthly direct debits, personal travel arrangement of some sort as well as transactions between friends, and to and from his Monzo Pots.

3rd July 2024

- (6) Back home, I was managing the house on my own. I spent over a week with barely any sleep, creating mood boards for the renovations and researching lights for the electrician. After discovering that the respondent had inaccurately measured the garden, claiming it was 7 metres shorter, I was left questioning whether the property measurements had been misrepresented during the exchange. My father and I dedicated two weeks to drawing up new floor plans with accurate measurements. In addition, I sorted through my boxes and managed to clear out ten of them. I also spent three days researching and testing various interior design software to effectively plan the essential renovations for the two bathrooms (see Exhibit n° ISS-24/A).
- (a) When I finally chose one, I dedicated the entire day to learning how to use the software, starting early in the morning. I watched video tutorials and worked on technical 3D drawings. Meanwhile, the respondent lay on the couch, watching Netflix and smoking a lot of weed. Not once did he offer to help.
- (b) Despite everything I was doing, the respondent would come back from the pub shouting that I was "doing fuck all", followed by obscenities like, "Do I have to do everything around here?" In response to this absurdity, I had asked him not to speak to me and to give me personal space, particularly in the bedroom. Of course, he ignored my request and, after work, positioned himself next to me on the bed, continuing his relentless accusations. All I could muster was, "I thought we agreed on you leaving me alone".
- (c) The respondent then leaned over me and, with an ironic laugh, said, "Let's see what you've done today—three lines? Oh well done!" (see Exhibit n° ISS-24/B).
- (d) By managing my time and observing all the hard work I was doing around the house, the respondent was fully aware of the hours I was putting in and the physically demanding tasks I was handling. Yet, he consistently dismissed every single thing I accomplished. While I was tirelessly working, he would once again be lounging on the couch, watching TV and getting high. It was unbelievable that he thought it was appropriate to disrespect me by claiming I was doing "fuck all"

10th July 2024

- (7) The respondent woke me up demanding I'd put the money back in the joint account, I calmly refused by giving him a short and direct explanation and called him a thief taking my money out of the joint account and for refusing to pay me towards household purchases
- (a) The respondent then grabbed a 2L heavy duty refillable water bottle that was full to the top and physically intimidated me with it, clenching the fist that had the bottle in and pretended to hit me with it repeating over and over: "put the money back in the joint account, put the money back in the joint account."
- (b) He then began to laugh at me and tried slapping me on the face multiple times, then repeatedly pulled the duvet off me and attempted to pull off the mattress.

- (c) While I was still not reacting, I had asked the respondent to stop, multiple times and to leave me alone. But he had no intention of stopping. He then got up while I was lying on the bed, and stood over me, opened the lid of the water bottle, I am not certain but I believe he was (it has been recorded and attached as evidence to confirm this) laughing while beginning counting down from five, saying that if I hadn't put the money back by the end of it he would have emptied the bottle of water over my head.
- (d) At that point, the electrician that was standing outside on alert mode after hearing everything knocked at the door, called the respondent over saying: "it doesn't sound good at all from over here, stop!", and took him away from the bedroom making him go downstairs with him (see Exhibit n° ISS-25).
- (8) It was just a constant monologue from the respondent; there was never any intention of having a genuine discussion. He only sought confirmation that he was right and I was wrong. He felt superior as he screamed at me, calling me lazy and worthless. The respondent's sole intention was to dominate and win, with all his behaviour aimed at proving himself right at any cost.
- (9) However, simple tasks, like sending me a text with the five dates we had planned, took him from November all the way to February 7th to complete.
- (10) The respondent's unrelenting anger made it impossible for me to speak. I found myself living in silence, and the only time I could communicate with him without being shouted at was when we were using cocaine. As a recovered addict, I was very mindful of my use, only doing so when I needed to have a conversation with him, when I reached my limit of enduring the abuse, or when I felt extremely hopeless and unable to get out of bed. Occasionally, I used it as a way to help me remain non-reactive to his outbursts.
- (11) The constant threats directed towards my cats, the controlling decisions he made regarding our home, the persistent insults and lack of respect and appreciation he showed towards my parents, the shouting and yelling, throwing my belongings at me or damaging them against the wall, the ongoing belittling, name-calling, and undermining of me, the humiliating and degrading language he directed at me, the never-ending criticism, the manipulation, the monitoring of my time and making me account for it, the enforced rules and regulations he used to control me, the constant punishments he subjected me to, the threats and violence he used to inflict pain and fear, the restrictions and tension he created in our home, the anxiety and depression that ensued, the repercussions on my health and that of my friends and family, and the negative impact on my social life—I had enough (see Exhibit n° ISS-26).
- (12) I wasn't sleeping or eating, I had constant panic attacks, and even when we were asleep the respondent would kick me in bed, or call me names, or "spoiled brat".
- (13) After the discussion about the money he owed me, which he refused to pay back, his violence escalated like never before, and the threats to my cats continued. I genuinely feared for my life and the lives of my two cats. I needed to keep them safe, so my parents agreed to look after them until the respondent was no longer in my life.
- (14) I had to move out of the house, and this wasn't the first time. Multiple times, I had to flee to friends' houses for consecutive days because the respondent's behaviour posed a risk to my safety.
